

Cool URIs don't change

After reading the nice article from Tim Berners-Lee Cool URIs don't change I decided to try to make my websites cool.

So you should NOT stumble upon any 404-file not found when bookmarking pages on my sites. If I add a file, page, graphic or otherwise it will stay.

The only exception might be that I put directories called tmp or temp in my files sections - a place to drop things for a short while. The typical use would be for a single person to download something from me.

So I will either keep the pages running, or insert a short pointer to the new location - for people to update their bookmarks.

Websites covered by this concept

The websites covered by this concept are those that I currently administer:

- kramse.dk - my homepage
- security6.net - my consultancy firm
- inet6.dk - IPv6 my thesis and other stuff

Websites which have been removed

- sikkerhedsforum.dk - this website is removed entirely as the group was abandoned

Sorry

I have to apologize that not all my pages live up to this - there has been a lot of small problems while changing CMS. I have learnt a lot about what not to do when designing the structure of websites and linking to my own pages!

Default Publication